New on the Blog: What Would That Bee?

What kind of bee are you looking at? You might come across various familiar, yellow and black, flying insects from the Apis and Vespula genus. So which bee would that be?

Read the full blog post, "What Would That Bee?" on our blog page on Monday!

Also, check out a past blog, "DIY Composting 101" by Maddie Worth!

Team Spotlight: Meghan Lockman

Starting next week, please welcome our new Executive Director, Meghan Lockman!

Meghan is an undergraduate from the College of William and Mary, earned her masters from Vanderbilt University, and MBA from Loyola University of Maryland. She previously worked in environmental consulting, and is finishing up her role as ED at Chester Ridley Crum Watersheds Association.

Fun fact, Meghan has been a treehugger since she was a kid (before it was cool). She would prefer to spend her days outdoors- hiking, biking, camping, and swimming in the ocean!

From Our Partners

Riverways is a consortium of seven nonprofits working together to create connections between the local waterways and communities in the Philadelphia-Camden region.

Riverways welcomes the leadership of Liza Herzog, post Interim LandHealth Executive Director. Stay tuned for Riverways updates, events, and exchanges on their website!

Thank You!

LandHealth Institute would like to take the time to thank a recent donor!

Inspire is a mission-driven, clean energy company that subscribes people to a world where energy from renewable sources is a better choice for their home and the environment. Founded in 2014, Inspire has made it easy for hundreds of thousands of people to join the clean energy movement and take action against climate change.

With support from Inspire, LandHealth is continuing in their mission to restore connections between nature and people. We hope to bring more at-the-source environmental education, community-based land revitalization, and introducing the next generation of stewards! We are excited to collaborate with Inspire in the future!
